HUMAN RESOURCES SPECIALIST

GS-201-9

Introduction

This is a standardized position description intended for use in a Regional Division of Personnel Management Office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (Service). The employee serves as a Human Resources Specialist providing support services for assigned organizations. The organizations serviced are geographically dispersed and are characterized by a wide variety of professional, technical, administrative, clerical, skilled, and semi-skilled craft positions. The employee in this position utilizes and applies a variety of principles, methods and concepts of one or more of the following: position classification; employee relations; labor relations; recruitment and placement; employee benefits; compensation; and/or performance management. Typical, but not all inclusive duties are:

Major Duties:

The employee reviews requests for personnel actions requiring classification action to determine proper grade, title, and series of positions. Classification actions processed include professional, administrative, clerical, technical, and wage grade positions covering a wide variety of grades, organizational levels, and various work environments. Performs analysis of appropriate classification and job grading standards in order to make classification decisions and/or recommendations to supervisor on assigned actions.

Prepares evaluation statements on position classification actions. Assists operating officials in the preparation of position descriptions by explaining classification standards, procedural aspects of position classification, and anticipated impact on recruitment efforts of alternative classification decisions.

Advises employees, applicants, and selecting officials regarding employment opportunities and the recruitment and selection procedures, from the Office of Personnel Management registers, from special employment programs, and from the Merit Staffing Program. Recommends alternatives to employment problems.

Assists managers and supervisors with the development of crediting plans, issues vacancy announcements, evaluates candidates for merit promotion, prepares and issues certificates, and ensures that selections are made in accordance with Departmental, Service, and Office of Personnel Management rules, regulations, and procedures.

Interprets, applies, and implements Service employment programs. Prepares Regional instructions, notices, and memoranda for implementation.

Responsible for ensuring all promotions, excepted appointments and promotions, reassignments, transfers, and volunteer demotions are made in accordance with regulations.

Counsels and advises supervisors on moderately complex employee relations issues involving such concerns as disciplinary actions, performance improvement plans, ethical issues, and grievances.

Counsels and advises supervisors on moderately complex labor relations issues involving such concerns as union grievances, labor agreement interpretation, and ULP's.

Provides advice and counseling to employees regarding their rights, benefits, and obligations deriving from Federal employment including leave, health and life insurance, retirement (CSRS & FERS), TSP, etc. Keeps abreast of any changes to the retirement and benefits program and determines potential effect to employees.

Provides information on Pay Administration to assigned area. This covers the Fair Labor Standards Act and Title 5, and how they apply to overtime, pay while in travel status, holiday leave, premium pay, etc. Keeps employees and supervisors informed of all changes as they occur.

Compiles, coordinates, and prepares reports pertaining to assigned program.

Works with the Federal Personnel/Payroll System (FPPS) as well as other computer systems and software in effecting personnel actions and completing work assignments.

Actively supports and implements the equal opportunity program as specified in national and local affirmative action plans.

1. Knowledge Required by the Position:

Knowledge of Federal laws and regulations and of Department/Service policies and procedures as they apply to personnel management in general, and to position classification, employee relations, labor relations, recruitment and placement, employee benefits, compensation, and performance management. Skill in the use of fundamental principles, concepts, techniques, standards and guides of position classification, employee relations, labor relations, recruitment and placement, employee benefits, compensation, and/or performance management to determine, evaluate, and apply appropriately.

Knowledge of the occupational and organizational structure of the Region and functional relationships of Human Resources specialties in order to serve as an advisor regarding position classification, employee relations, labor relations, recruitment and placement, employee benefits, compensation, and performance management.

Technical knowledge and skill in the application of the principles, practices and techniques of position classification, employee relations, labor relations, recruitment and placement, employee benefits, compensation, and performance management.

Ability to research and interpret EEO, MSPB, FLRA, and related case law and apply to HR management issues.

Ability to apply analytical and problem-solving methods to moderately complex HR management issues in order to distill pertinent facts, determine relevant regulations and case law, and develop and provide advice and solutions to managers and supervisors.

Knowledge of recruitment sources and availability of qualified employees, of re-employment priority lists, separated career employees, recruiting sources, preparation of announcements, and other specialized recruitment methods.

Knowledge of benefits available to Federal employees in order to provide advice and counsel.

Knowledge of Title 5 and the Fair Labor Standards Act and how they apply to exempt and nonexempt employees.

Ability to communicate on a professional level orally and in writing relating to case law, regulation changes, Regional instructions, and procedures to be followed on matters pertaining to a wide range of personnel actions.

2. Supervisory Controls:

Works under general supervision. The supervisor assigns work, provides information on overall objectives, goals, and specific deadlines, and provides instruction on new or revised regulations and policies. The employee works independently in carrying out recurring assignments to completion, but may consult the supervisor on new and/or unusual problems and difficulties. Completed work is reviewed for soundness of overall approach, proper interpretation, and conclusions.

3. Guidelines:

Guides include of the U.S. Code, the CFR, OPM regulations and operating manuals, Departmental and Service manuals, Regional operating procedures, precedent case determinations, Classification Standards and Qualification Standards. The guides available may not be directly applicable in some instances. Guides typically require interpretation and modification to adapt them to the actual situation in order to produce results which are compatible with management needs.

4. Complexity:

The duties relate to each of the Regional programs with a wide variety of activities. They involve manpower utilization of professional, administrative, technical, clerical, supervisory and delegation of appointing authority, and impact a wide variety of people, offices, and field stations in several states. Therefore, the employee must exercise judgment in the interpretation of guidelines which may not be completely applicable when providing advice and assistance because work is further complicated by the need to ensure that a variety of procedures, rules, regulations, and instruction are understood and followed.

5. Scope and Effect:

Responsibilities involve analyses and classification; providing guidance on employee relations, labor relations, recruitment and placement, employee benefits compensation, and performance management. The accomplishment of the assigned functions influences the decisions of supervisors and managers and promotes the efficiency and timely operation of the Region's Personnel program.

6. Personal Contacts:

Regular and recurring contacts are with co-workers, employees, supervisors and managers, job applicants, students, and the general public. Other contacts are with Human Resources Specialists in the Service, the Office of Personnel Management, other agencies, legal staffs, union stewards, educational institutions, and special emphasis groups.

7. Purpose of Contacts:

Contacts are made to provide factual information on which recommendations, decisions, or other actions can be based; to explain issues surrounding personnel decisions, recommendations, and actions; and to help further understanding of the Service's personnel management policies and programs. In addition, with the advisory services characteristic of the position, the employee must be able to gain the confidence of supervisors and management staff officials so that the employee's advice will be accepted and acted upon.

8. Physical Demands:

The work is sedentary. There is some standing, walking, and bending.

9. Work Environment:

The work is performed in an office setting. The employee is expected to conduct duties in a safe and orderly manner so as not to endanger self, fellow workers, or property with which entrusted. Occasional travel is required.
